Secretary Bryan replied that the De-could assume.

No Call for Marines.
President Wilson told callers to-day Rear Admiral Fletcher had not recommended that a force of marines be sent to Mexico City, and he admitted the American rear admiral had been asked for and had not submitted any recommendation, but mere-ported conditions as he saw them, to continue their misdeeds.

The note also says in substance that without questioning the right of the United States to adopt any policy it sees fit toward Mexico, the Mexican government draws attention to the conduct of the rebels wherever they come into control. Far from establishing any semblance of orderly government, they give palpable proofs of their anarchic tendencies, and of their absolute authority.

EUGENICS CALLED SNARE AND JOKE

Appeals to Men Morally Long Haired and Women Intellectually Short Haired, Says Professor.

Berkeley, Cal., Feb. 26.—Branding eugenics as the greatest snare of modern thought, Professor A. L. Kroeber, of the department of anthropology of the University of California, said in a lecture to-day that the movement was a "joke."

"The American press and public treat it as such," he added. "Heredity is the most misunderstood subject under discussion to-day. Ninety-nine per cent of what is commonly attributed to heredity has nothing whatever to do with it, and is merely a matter of environment."

"Scientists have run riot with the idea until they fail to distinguish between heredity, which comes from the inside, and inheritance, which, like a fortune, comes from the outside. Civilization is an inheritance, pure and simple, not caused in the slightest degree by heredity. Civilization has progressed, but man has stood still and probably will always remain the same."

"The men of the ice age possessed the same mental capacities of the Anglo-Saxon of to-day, and until this fact is recognized all history will continue to be misunderstood. So far as civilization is concerned, there is no such thing as an Anglo-Saxon breed or a white man's burden. Kipling does not know what a race is or what civilization means."

Eugenics appeal to men who are morally long-haired and to the women who are intellectually short-haired." being received with intense pride and gratification throughout Australia. His perilous journeyings in the frozen south, including a heart-breaking interval of thirty days spent in absolute solitude, have not been undertaken without a death toll, and while Australia mourns the loss of two such worthy members of the expedition and brave men as Lieutenant Ninnis and Dr.

Mertz, the fact of their tragic ends merely adds to the sincerity and warmth of the welcome home given to the other members of the expedition.

Fuller particulars of the events culminating in the death of Ninnis and Mertz indicate that the former's end and his disappearance in a crevasse must have been terrible in the extreme.
Dr. Mawson's dogged march of three hundred miles, though nearly starving and blinded by a blizzard, was one of the finest acts of personal courage ever recorded in polar exploration.

Dr. Mawson's Narrative.

The following thrilling narrative was told by Dr. Mawson himself in an interview had with him shortly after his arrival in Adelaide:

"After picking up her party from its base the Aurora made an extended cruise to the west, pushing into the pack wherever possible, in attempts to discover new land and at the same time taking soundings and doing deep sea dredging. This work was most successful and most pleasing. Indeed, I am sure that this collection of biological material is the best that has been obtained from the Antarctic."

"Our operations extended as far down into the sea as two miles, and some very valuable information, as well as animals of all kinds, were discovered.
Very little had been done in the matter of deep-sea work hitherto, as this difficult work did not have much luck the first year, but Captain Davis, who was in charge of the heavy and complicated gear, became a thorough master of it, and the later results were exceptionally fine."

"The world is being worked out as regards new spots for exploration, but there is five times as much ocean as land, and this affords a wonderful opportunity for research and investigation."

Asked as to the character of the discoveries he had made, Dr. Mawson stated: "Nearly everything we got is new to science, and on the whole it is really a splendid collection. I have no
